

Norfolk transport services are now offering a waste kitchen re-cycling service

Waste kitchen units and worktops can be collected from sites and transported to a location for processing into a useable product that is passed on for use in agriculture, construction and other sustainable industries.

By providing this service we are able to avoid waste kitchen products being buried in landfill sites and can ensure they are used in an environmentally friendly way.

For a competitive service charge we can collect waste materials directly from sites using our fleet of modern vehicles, collections are planned to coincide with the removal of old kitchens and are undertaken in a professional manner. Great care and attention is paid regarding cleanliness and safe working practice.

Norfolk transport services have been providing this service successfully since the beginning of 2008 and are committed to expanding their customer base in order to meet local and national recycling targets and cut down on the use of landfill.
